National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment
An area of low pressure will become slow moving over the far north of Scotland on Sunday, bringing a strong west to southwesterly airstream to much of the country. Several frontal systems and troughs within this airstream will bring frequent showers and even longer spells of rain. A further 15-25 mm is expected quite widely within the warning area, with perhaps 30-40 mm over higher ground in the west. With the ground still saturated after the recent wet weather, these amounts of rain will be enough to cause some surface water flooding. Spray will be an added hazard especially during daylight Sunday, when it will be blown by the gale force winds.

This is an update to the warning issued on Saturday, to extend the warning area further north. A further update is possible later today as the rain becomes more focused over the south of the warning area.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 09:00 on Sun, 07th Feb 2016 until 06:00 on Mon, 08th Feb 2016

Showers or longer spells of rain will affect much of southern and western Scotland during Sunday and into Sunday night. The rain will be accompanied by gale force west to southwesterly winds during daylight Sunday, with gusts of 45-55 mph quite widely, perhaps 60-65 mph over exposed coasts and bridges. Please be aware of some difficult driving conditions due to standing water and spray, and perhaps localised surface water flooding.
